Little Red Riding-Hood.

TALE I.

ONCE upon a time there lived in a certain village, a little country girl, the prettiest creature ever was seen. Her mother was excessively fond of her; and her grandmother doated on her much more. This good woman got made for her a little red Riding-Hood; which became the girl so extremely well, that every body called her Little Red Riding-Hood.

One day, her mother, having made some custards, said to her, Go, my dear, and see how thy grand-mamma does, for I hear she has been very ill; carry her a custard, and this little pot of butter. Little Red Riding-Hood sets out immediately to go to her grand-mother, who lived in another village. As she was going thro' the wood, she met with Gaffer Wolf, who had a very great mind to eat her up, but he durst not, because of some faggot-makers hard by in the forest.

He asked her, whither she was going: The poor child, who did not know that it was dangerous to stay and hear a Wolf talk, said to him, I am going to see my grand-mamma, and carry her a custard, and a little pot of butter, from my mamma. Does she live far off? said the Wolf. Oh! ay, answered Little Red Riding-Hood, it is beyond that mill you see there, at the first house in the village. Well, said the Wolf, and I'll go and see her too; I'll go this way,

The Wolf began to run as fast as he could, taking the nearest way;
and the little girl went by that farthest about, diverting herself in gathering nuts, running after butterflies, and making nosegays of such little flowers as she met with. The Wolf was not long before he got to the old woman's house: He knocked at the door, tap, tap. Who's there? Your grand-child, Little Red Riding-Hood (replied the Wolf, counterfeiting her voice) who has brought you a custard, and a little pot of butter, sent you by mamma.

The good grand-mother, who was in bed, because she found herself somewhat ill, cried out, Pull the bobbin, and the latch will go up. The Wolf pulled the bobbin, and the door opened, and then presently he fell upon the good woman, and eat her up in a moment; for it was above three days that he had not touched a bit. He then shut the door, and went into the

The Wolf cried out to her, softening his voice as much as he could, Pull the bobbin, and the latch will go up. Little Red Riding-Hood pulled the bobbin, and the door opened.

The Wolf seeing her come in, said to her, hiding himself under the bed-cloaths; Put the custard, and the little pot of butter upon the stool, and come and lye down by me. Little Red Riding-Hood undressed herself, and went into bed; where, being greatly amazed to see how her grand-mother looked in her night cloaths, said to her, Grand-mamma, what great arms you have

Red Riding-Hood.

Red Riding-Hood, expecting Little Red Riding-Hood, who came some time and knocked at the door, who's there? Little Red hearing the big voice of Grand-mother had got a hoarse, answered, 'Tis I, Little Red Riding-Hood brought you a custard, and butter, mamma sends the Wolf cried out to her, as much as he could, and the latch will go up. Little Red Riding-Hood pulled the door opened.

Seeing her come in, said she hid herself under the bed. The custard, and the little upon the stool, and come by me. Little Red Riding-Hood herself, and went into being greatly amazed. Her grand-mother looked at her, said to her, what great arms you have have got! That is the better to hug thee, my dear. Grand-mamma, what great Legs you have got! That is to run the better, my child. Grand-mamma, what great ears you have got! That is to hear the better, my child. Grand-mamma, what great eyes you have got! That is to see the better, my child. Grand-mamma, what great teeth you have got! That is to eat thee up. And, saying these words, this wicked Wolf fell upon poor Little Red Riding-Hood, and eat her all up.

The MORAL.

From this short story easy we discern
What conduct all young people ought to learn.

But above all, young, growing misses fair,
Whose orient rosy blooms begin to appear:
Who, beauties in the fragrant springs
of age,

With pretty airs young hearts are apt to engage.

Ill do they listen to all sorts of tongues,
Since some inchant and lure like Syrens songs.

12 Little Red Riding-Hood.

No wonder therefore 'tis if over-pow-er'd,
So many of them has the Wolf devour'd.
The Wolf, I say, for Wolves too sure there are
Of every sort, and every character.
Some of them mild and gentle humour'd be,
Of noise and gall, and rancour wholly free;
Who tame, familiar, full of complaisance
Ogle and leer, languish, cajole and glance;
With luring tongues, and language wond'rous sweet,
Follow young ladies as they walk the street,
Ev'n to their very houses, nay, beside,
And, artful, tho' their true designs they hide:
Yet ah! these simpering Wolves who does not see
Most dang'rous of all Wolves in fact to be.
