ONCE UPON A TIME, there was a Big Bad Wolf who lived in the woods.
Well, that's not quite true. . . . Really, she was a Sweet Little Wolf who loved all things pretty and pink, especially fairy tales.

Red Riding Hood was
reading a story out loud:

"Once upon a time, with a flick of a wand, a girl's rags turned into a beautiful gown fit for a ball."

It was a fairy tale!
Sweet Little Wolf pricked
up her ears and listened.

The girl was reading again:

"Once upon a time, a girl was rescued from a tower in the middle of a forest by a handsome prince."

Sweet Little Wolf lay down in Grandma's soft, cozy bed.
She would just listen to one more story.

Then she would be a real wolf.

A woodcutter heard Red Riding Hood's cry and ran toward the cottage as fast as he could.

But Sweet Little Wolf didn't leap out of bed and chase Red Riding Hood. She hid under the covers and sobbed great big tears.

"I don't want to be a Big Bad Wolf," she cried.

"I want to listen to fairy tales."

lovely little girls!
Well, she was a wolf after all!
